COAL NOT DAMAGED BY STAY IN WATER

Less Than 10 Per Cent Loss of Efficiency Noted in Coal Found in Maine's Bunkers.

Experiments which have just been completed by the steam engineering authorities of the navy upon the coal recovered from the bunkers of the wrocked thorities of the navy upon the ceal recovered from the bunkers of the wrecked hattle ship Maine have disclosed that the loss of afficiency in the burning and ateam-producing qualities, as result of being submerged in the water for fourteen years, was less than 10 per cent.
The tests were conducted at the ensincering experimental station at Annapolis. The authorities were anxious to determine whether much destribution had resulted from the subsqueous stornage of coal. It was not possible to absolutely identify the mine from which this old coal came, but autfocient data was available to establish with reamousable certainty the general character of the coal and also the mine.
No evaporative tests had been made in the coal as originally stowed in the bunkers of the Maine, but the conclusion that it was less than 10 per cent was gained from comparisons with evaporative tests made on coal that was believed to be practically identical in all qualities, presumably taken from the same mine.
